Rivalry Grows For Divorces

Validity Of Decrees From Mexico State Doubt By Distinguished Local Lawyer

By WILLIAM H. LANDER

United Press Staff Correspondent
MEXICO CITY (UP)—The hitherto obscure little Mexican state of Tlaxcala is rapidly attaining a marked reputation as a fast-growing divorce center.

Each letter of the name is pronounced, and the result is Tlax-ka-la. Although it is not as easy to pronounce and spell as Reno, marriages are just as easy to sever as they are in the famous United States resort.

The sovereign states of Chihuahua (just across the border from El Paso, Texas) and Morelos (the capital of which is Cuernavaca) have received widespread notoriety for quick Mexican divorces. Now, however, the facility of getting a Tlaxcalan divorce is becoming more and more evident.

Tlaxcala is located off the beaten path and is hedged between the states of Mexico, Puebla and Hidalgo. It is rich in historical background, for Conquistador Hernan Cortes arrived there from Vera Cruz and made an alliance with the Tlaxcaltecs who were bitter enemies of the Aztecs. With their aid, Cortez conquered the Aztec empire.

Until recently Tlaxcala's only claim for recognition was through its wool output. Suddenly the papers were filled with mysterious notices summoning someone (who probably would never have occasion to read that particular paper) to appear at some court room in Tlaxcala to answer divorce proceedings, or else be declared a "rebel."

The divorce center has critics as well as supporters. Victor Velasquez, a Mexico City lawyer, denounced the quick divorces as being not only illegal abroad but also in Mexico. Courts in the United States recently commented adversely on the Mexican divorces, and Argentine judges considered them without force.

These divorces are not even legal in our country," Velasquez declared.

THE Book Mark

By JANE VOILES

One evening last week Robin Lampson, author of "Laughter Out of the Ground," gave a preview of his new book "Death Loses a Pair of Wings" which will be published next spring. The title really means what it says as the subject of the book is the eradication of yellow fever from the world.

A scientific subject, written in cadence? Why not?

Mr. Lampson states his convictions about poetry in no vague terms. "Poetry," he asserts, "should be about life and not an escape. It should be intelligible to readers and it should communicate an experience."

We may call the age in which we live commercial and prosaic but Mr. Lampson declares that it is full of poetry. "The abdication of Edward VIII, for example," Mr. Lampson says, "is the best play that Shakespeare did not write."

"The times are full of thrilling, epic material," he continues, "the winning of the West, the achievements of science, the problems of labor, the struggle for higher standards of living."

Mr. Lampson's new book has all of the elements of the old English epic, "Beowulf," according to its author. In the old epic the monster Grendel lurked in its hiding place and was slain after frightful struggles. In "Death Loses a Pair of Wings," the tiny mosquitoes are monsters, more terrible than Grendel. Dr. Gorgas who is the chief character in the book, found a means of combating the mosquitoes and so, stripped death of a pair of wings.

Since little is known about the life of Dr. Gorgas, Mr. Lampson has done much research. Dr. Gorgas was born in Mobile, Alabama in 1854. His father, Josiah Gorgas, was the confederate general who is said to have prolonged the Civil War one year by furnishing ammunition to General Lee. Because he was the son of a confederate officer, young Gorgas was denied admission to West Point. He studied medicine, however, joined the medical corps and rose to high rank. His great opportunity came in 1901. In five months' time he wiped yellow fever out of Cuba where it had been a scourge for over 200 years. Dr. Gorgas added space to our habitable planet. As the French had been defeated by mosquitoes in their attempt to build the Panama Canal, he made the great project possible.

Hearing little about yellow fever today, we have forgotten its power to destroy. For 250 years yellow fever had been invading the United States. As late as 1898 people were stricken in 300 cities and towns and there were many deaths. Truly with the work of Dr. Gorgas's death lost a pair of wings. Here is a soldier who did not destroy life but saved it.

"Death Loses a Pair of Wings," tells the entire story of the life of Dr. Gorgas. Mr. Lampson has communicated with the doctor's daughter who lives in Washington, D. C., with the doctor's aged sister in Alabama and with many people who knew Dr. Gorgas. It is the life story of a great man—his joys, sorrows and disappointments; his loves, loyalties and friendships. We look forward eagerly to its publication.

The MacMillan Company published this year a book on Marconi by Orrin E. Dunlap—"Marconi: the Man and His Wireless."

Next month the University of California Press will bring out "Some Unpublished Letters of Lord Chesterfield," Dr. Sidney L. Gulick who is editing the letters, discovered them under curious circumstances.

"People don't read books while on vacation, they read movie magazines," we heard a man say. We didn't like the sound of it. Now our nose would never get us into Hollywood but it is of an adequate size to pry into people's book business, so we have been asking vacation reading habits of our friends and their friends.

We found out that people pack bookage along with baggage. One man reads the books of Ambrose Bierce every summer, another reads Prout's "Remembrance of Things Past." Neither one was ever bored because they were always discovering things they had missed the time before. A private secretary who never goes near a cook stove reads cook books with great gusto while on vacation, and a housewife, ready to forget pots and pans, reads books on astronomy. One woman "commutes" to the 18th century every summer; a man in the intervals of fishing is planning to read Hemingway's novels.

Take a new book and an old book. Robert's "Northwest Passage" for the new book and something decidedly different for the old—Arthur Ryder's translations of some of the Hindu writings—"Kalidasa" or "Shakuntala." Or you might take Steinbeck's "Of Mice and Men" and by all means, his "Tortilla Flat" if you haven't read it and a very old book Herodotus' "History" translated by George Rawlinson. We haven't read it but we are always coming across interesting items from it, this one, for example: about a tribe of Thracians "whose custom it was to wall over the birth of a child and to bury the dead with festive joy as being released from their troubles." Or you could read the new book by Hobgen "Mathematics for the Million" and an old novel, "Joseph Andrews" in which Fielding created those memorable characters: Lady Booby, Mrs. Slipshod and Parson Adams. If you must stick to Hollywood even in vacation time there is "The Great Goldwyn" by Alva Johnston and an antidote, or perhaps, we should say as a foil, read Hazlitt's readable "Dramatic Literature of the Age of Elizabeth."

Chemists Aid Crime War

Hand Of Killer Is Key To Solution Of Many Cases, Laboratory Men Declare

MILWAUKEE (UP)—Milwaukee gunmen are being trapped in a chemist's laboratory.

White-coated city chemists working quietly among their test tubes, beakers and flasks have become the gun-carrying criminal's worst enemies.

Under the leadership of Russell W. Cunliffe, director of the bureau of laboratories, the chemists have developed a test which they believe is virtually error-proof in connecting a gun with the person who fired it.

The chemical experts have improved the method of linking a gunman and his gun through paraffin tests by recording the exact distribution of powder marks left by a gun on the shooter's hands.

When police detain a suspect in a shooting case they take him immediately to the detective bureau for a paraffin mold of his hand. The mold then is turned over to Cunliffe who tests it for traces of powder.

"Powder contains a nitrate," Cunliffe explained. "When a gun is fired microscopic particles bore into the skin of the hand holding the weapon."

Traces of powder are picked up by the mold, the chemist said. When a nitrate testing solution is applied to the mold, blue spots appear if the nitrate is present.

While one chemist applies the nitrate tester to the mold, others note and record the number, size and distribution of the blue particles.

On a diagram of the hand the testers record where each particle of powder is found.

MIDDLEMEN MORE NUMEROUS THAN FARM OWNERS

Farmers who have not yet discovered why they generally get the short end of the economic stick and consumers who wonder why food prices are high will be enlightened by a report issued by the United States Census Bureau.

It disclosed that in 1935 there stood between the farmer and his city customer 6,848,154 wholesale and retail dealers. This is 400,000 more than all the farms in this country. Every sixth citizen is taking toll from both the farmer and the consumer.

There is an old saying that when a worker enters a factory he carries a wife and two children on his back. According to the Census Bureau, every farm is compelled to tote a middleman who insists on being maintained in the style to which he is accustomed. An earlier report shows that the average income of the middleman is nearly three times larger than that of the farmer.

EPSOM SALTS HELPS KILL 'HOPPERS'

NORMAN, Okla. (UP)—Farmers in the grasshopper-plagued area in Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle are turning to an inexpensive control formula for the crop-destroying pests—one in which common Epsom salts (magnesium sulphate) is substituted for the arsenite.

The formula is the work of Dr. and Mrs. Hubert W. Frings and is based on research work in this line done several years ago.

Frings' formula: Bran, 60 to 65 per cent; molasses, 15 per cent; Epsom salts, 20 to 25 per cent, and enough water to moisten into a mash which can be scattered without being too thick or too thin.

Dr. V. R. Haber of Pennsylvania State College is said to have discovered several years ago that Epsom salts are poisonous to insects. Other formulae involving Epsom salts have been used against chewing insects, including wheat wireworms in Maine and bean beetles in Pennsylvania.

It is said that the Frings' formula is harmless to livestock, birds, human beings and poultry.

Fire Falls 700 Feet In Park

Rangers Measure Distance On Face Of Glacier Point With Aid Of Film Box

Since 1874 the firefall over Glacier Point, 3254 feet above the valley floor, has been one of the most spectacular and uniquely beautiful of Yosemite's many attractions. Every evening during the summer, vacationists by the thousands throughout the valley gather in silence for this 9 o'clock ceremony, and to many it is the most unforgettable of the impressions they receive on their visit. But, until last week, no one knew exactly how far the firefall fell. Estimates varied from 500 feet to as high as 1400 feet.

It remained for two practical-minded ranger naturalists, Ted Godwin and Elmer Lucas, to establish the height of the fall once and for all. While Lucas, who is in charge of the ranger station at Glacier Point, lowered a film box with weights attached over the cliff by means of a cord, Godwin stood on the projecting granite ledge below and signaled when it touched the pile of ashes at the bottom. The distance was found to be 700 feet, a sheer drop nearly 80 feet greater than that of Bridalveil Fall.

On the ledge which is about 150 feet wide Godwin found much of interest. The thick carpet of charcoal there, five feet in depth in certain places where the winter snow had not carried it away, bore mute witness to the thousands of fires that have been built on Glacier Point and slowly raked over its edge with a long-handled "hoe." Growing in undisturbed solitude was a red fir tree which he estimated to be all of 130 feet high, while green herbage and luxuriant wildflowers, phoenix-like, arose from the ashes.

Barts Lose In Play-Off

who, with the count two and two on Lippert, threw a wild pitch and Mackay went home with the winning run. The game was close and gained interest throughout, due to the tension caused by a fight between Manager Aubrey Warren of the Barts and Manager Gallagher of the Folsom team before the start of the contest.

Playing as the home nine the Folsom team scored in the opening frame, when Gallagher got a fluke hit off Visintainer's glove. Mackay advanced the Folsom manager by a sacrifice. Henry Clark, hit to Clark the local shortstop making his first error on the play. Gallagher went to third from where he scored on Merle Reeder's long fly to left.

The Barts, displaying their only hitting of the day, took a two run lead by scoring three times in the third. Patterson led off with a hit over third base and was followed by Roderick who singled to right. Reeder forced the local pitcher at second, but both Patterson and Reeder scored on Neil's long triple to center. Visintainer followed with a double to score Neil and the rally ended with Prince going out, short to first.

The Placerville lead lasted only until Folsom came to bat in their half of the same inning, for Folsom, with the aid of two hits a walk and an error, tied the score. Gallagher again led off with a drooper over the infield, good for a single and went to second when Patterson muffed the ball in right. Roderick got by Mackay and Clark but issued a pass to Reeder, who promptly stole second. C. Mackay drove a hit into right to score Gallagher and Reeder with the tying runs. Mackay was out on an attempted steal. Prince to Clark.

The scoring then ended until the eighth, when the Barts scored again. Roderick gaining first on a pass, advanced to second on Reeder's sacrifice and scored on Visintainer's hit over third.

Eddie Reeder cut short an attempted Folsom rally in the last of the eighth with his second sensational catch of the game. Reeder came in fast and took Clark's fly in back of second with the bases loaded, for the final out.

The Bartletts collected but eight hits off the offerings of Don Kipp on the mound for Folsom. Kipp struck out thirteen of the locals, Eddie Reeder being the only Bart not to fan.

Dave Roderick, touched for ten hits in the eight frames worked pitched good ball in the pinches. Roderick was kept in continual trouble by infield errors. The Barts being charged with seven.

Soviet Arctic Fliers To See Roosevelt At White House

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—Soviet Russia's second trio of transpolar fliers is en route to Washington, D. C., to convey their nation's greetings to President Roosevelt.

The three, Mikhail Gromov, Andrei Yumashev and Sergei Danilin, were scheduled to sail for Europe aboard the Normandie early in August on their way back to Moscow.

GRANDSTAND Gossip

By Bob Vivian

Folsom, on paper, should win the Placer-Nevada League championship for the second successive year. Meeting Auburn in the final, the Folsom nine, already having three wins over the Placer team, should take the Cubs for the title.

The Barts should have at least won Sunday's game by a 4-2 score. Clark, who has played ragged ball all year, gave his worst exhibition Sunday by tossing the ball away four times. Mike Visintainer also aided by making two misplays at third.

Eddie Reeder, twice during Sunday's game, pulled the Barts out of trouble by sensational catches in the outfield. Both catches were made with the bases loaded. The first came in the fourth when, after a long run, he took J. Mackay's long drive over his head for the final out. Again in the eighth he came in fast to take Clark's hit in back of short to retire the side.

Don Kipp hurled a great game for the Folsom nine, Kipp allowed but eight hits, and struck out thirteen of the locals. The Folsom chucker also aided his cause by driving out a double and single.

Among Kipp's strike out victims were: Neil twice, Visintainer, Prince twice, Backerich twice, Warren, Clark twice, Patterson two times, and Roderick. Reeder was the only Bart who did not go down swinging.

In seven of the nine innings, the first Folsom batter was safe on first. The prison city nine had men on bases in every inning, twenty-one being on base during the game, with fifteen dying on the sacks. The Barts got but eleven on the paths, four of them scoring and two being forced, the locals had but five left on bases.

The tussle between Warren and Gallagher, brought many of the fans who were leaving after the first game back to their seats, the spectators seemed to be evenly divided as regards to the mixup. Both Warren and Gallagher receiving boos and applause each time they came to bat.

The locals but once during the game showed any batting power. That was in the third, when Neil tripled, Visintainer doubled, and Patterson and Roderick singled. The balance of the game, except the ninth when Backerich and Clark hit, they were either striking out or hitting to the infield.

Louie Neil is one of the best if not the best second basemen in the league. Neil has finished the season without an error, and handled five chances Sunday. He robbed C. Mackay of a hit in the fifth when he took his bounder back of second, and while off balance threw Mackay out at first.

The defeat probably ends the season as far as the local team is concerned. It is doubtful whether any post season games will be scheduled.

The Colfax infield resembled the Barts in tossing the ball around. Hawk, the first baseman, continually dropped throws from the infield, that's when the infield could pick up the ball to throw it.

"Scoop" looked down-hearted after the Lions were beaten but went into wild excitement when Folsom beat the Bartletts. We didn't know Scoop had two teams in the league.

Minus One Leg, Youth Plays Fast Game Of Tennis

CLEVELAND (UP)—William Hancock, 25-year-old accountant, has only one leg, but his ambition is to become a first-class tennis player.

Hancock, whose left leg was amputated after he was injured in a street car accident 21 years ago, took up tennis in 1933.

Last winter, he began taking lessons from Phil Greenstein professional at the Indoor Tennis Club.

"He's the only one-legged netter I know in this district," says Greenstein, "and the form and power with which he hits the ball would make many two-legged players envious."

Hancock leaps about the court with the aid of his crutch. He plays only on a private court.

TWO-INCH SHELL TAKEN FROM SHOULDER OF MAN BY BALLISTICS EXPERT

MADRID (UP)—Jaime Rodriguez, 23, Loyalist militiaman, was reported recovering after an operation by which an unexploded two-inch shell was removed from his left shoulder with the aid of an artillery expert.

When Rodriguez reached the operating table surgeons found to their astonishment that his wound was from an explosive shell whose cap had failed to detonate.

Fearing that the shell would explode they deferred action. They called an artillery expert who, with Rodriguez oblivious under the influence of ether, took off the shell cap. Then the shell was extracted.

Father Paints Flag Pole To Pay Hospital For Baby

PHILADELPHIA (UP)—One week old Margaret Yost of Philadelphia was stamped "paid" today because her father Harry painted Hahnemann hospital's flag pole.

Yost owed the hospital $35 when Margaret was born here last week. He told hospital officials he couldn't pay, but he would make their flag pole "like new" in payment of the debt.

The industrious father, a WPA worker, completed the job on the 30-foot pole atop the 20 story building.

Landowner's Royalties Held Not To Be "Securities"

ties are held not to be "securities" under the Corporate Securities Act, in an opinion just rendered by Attorney General U. S. Webb.

In the opinion, rendered to Corporation Commissioner Edwin M. Dunham, Webb has declared that the rights of landowners to royalties on oil and gas production are not securities under the act.

The precise question as to the status of "landowner's royalties" was presented to the California Corporate Securities Act by a petition filed in the state court.

Unusual Discovery Is Made In Tests With Sensitive Sound Recording Device

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UP)—The quietest place in town is not the graveyard—but the local night club at 10 o'clock in the morning.

That was the discovery here of a sound engineer, P. K. Lipscomb, of Houston, demonstrating a device by which sound is measured. The sensitive recorder measures sound in "decibels."

Lipscomb set out to find Fort Worth's "quietest spot"—and got a few surprises. He chose an isolated spot in the cemetery. No funerals were in progress, but the wind howled and trees creaked while an airplane droned overhead. The "noise machine" kicked up to 48 decibels.

That was just six points less than the noise made on a busy street corner downtown.

He went to the reading room in a public library, a place where one and all must tiptoe and speak in whisper, if at all. The reading room at first was quiet—only 34 decibels—but a gentleman in a black beard dozed off, then began snoring. The recorder kicked up to 50—even noisier than the cemetery and street corner.

Next stop was the "quiet" zone near a hospital. Automobiles roared past and brakes squealed. The dial again reached a nerve-shattering 50.

Lipscomb decided to try one more spot—this time a "night spot." It was 10 a. m. The band was gone, and the last echo of laughter and clinking glasses disappeared. The noise recorder showed 30 decibels, quietest of all the places visited.

DAMAGES IN FRANCS

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UP)—A suit asking "43,185 French francs" damages was filed here by a finance corporation against a church school for a quantity of fabrics purchased in 1933. The suit represents $1,877.80 in American money. The goods was bought from a French manufacturer.

SEVERANCE ORDER NOT ASKED BY STATE IN INSURANCE OF UNEMPLOYED

SACRAMENTO—California employers who refuse to pay wages to employees leaving their service unless the employee signs an Unemployment Reserves Commission severance report, are violating commission rules.

John F. Chambers, member of the commission representing labor made this announcement today when he learned that a specific case of this type had been found in San Diego.

According to the letter written to the commission, an employee left the service of a San Diego employer and thereupon went to Los Angeles. The employer refused to pay his final wages until the severance report had been signed.

Chambers specifically stated that severance reports are no longer required by the commission. Instead of these reports, the commission now requires the quarterly earnings of California workers. These earnings are in lieu of the severance slip.
